Focus of the week: Living in the wider world

Across the next half term, the PHSE curriculum is 'Living in the Wider World'. This gives us chance to discuss protected characteristics such as race, religion and belief. This helps us to live peacefully in our local and wider communities.

The ways school helps

Assemblies and lessons provide a safe space for pupils to consider questions like

- What groups and communities am I part of?
- What is the difference between my local British communities and global communities?

Throughout the years at school, children learn about famous people from history such as Mary Seacole.

The study of books also help us see different viewpoints and understand how to live together in harmony eg. The Proudest Blue by Ibtihaj Muhammed.

Workshops

This week, the Year 5 pupils have taken part in 'no room for racism' workshops with coaching staff from city sport. These were well understood and received.

Racist language

We do not tolerate racist language in school. If racist or discriminatory language is used, it is discussed carefully so children understand why it is wrong and that it must not be repeated. School works with parents and families to ensure we are clear and open about our expectations.

Headteacher's Comment

Well done to Year 4 for their brilliant attitude to learning exploring Blackley as part of their Geography field work lessons.

We're excited for the photographer in school on Monday to take photographs of the children learning and playing ready for our new website - watch this space!
